IS IT SAFE?

Protect Yourself!

Cold and flu season is here. Are you prepared?

“Health officials estimate that the majority of Americans will get the flu this year and next.”

–The Seattle Times, Associated Press—Saturday, July 25, 2009

This would explain why, for the first time in history, schools have added hand sanitizer to the list of school supplies children need when returning back to the classroom. Great... but there is one problem! The active microbial agents and detergents in common hand sanitizers and hand soaps such as triclosan and sodium lauryl/laureth sulfate (SLS) are potential health hazards in themselves.

Commonly Used in Hand Sanitizers:

Triclosan

Cheap and Synthetic!

Warnings & Potential Risks

According to the Material Safety Data Sheet (MSDS) for triclosan:

- Avoid skin, eye and clothing contact
- Do not taste or swallow
- Do not inhale
- Use only with adequate ventilation
- Potential kidney and liver damage in laboratory research

“The antibacterial agent, triclosan has been strongly linked to abnormalities with the endocrine system, weakening of the immune system, birth defects, uncontrolled cell growth, and unhealthy weight loss.” --Dr. Ben Kim

Triclosan’s cheap and synthetic nature explains why it continues to be added to many common household and personal care items.

Go all the way... over the top! All of these safe, natural products will leave you wanting more!

Commonly Used in Hand Soaps:

Sodium Lauryl /Laureth Sulfate (SLS)

Cheap and Synthetic!

Warnings & Potential Risks

According to the Material Safety Data Sheet (MSDS) for sodium lauryl/laureth sulfate and the Journal of the American College of Toxicology:

- Potential carcinogen
- Should not come into contact with the skin, eyes respiratory system, or clothing
- Tests on lab animals indicate material may cause mutagenic effects
- May cause permanent damage to the eyes, even when not introduced directly to the eyes
- Skin penetration may occur even at low-use concentrations

Sodium lauryl/laureth sulfate’s cheap and synthetic nature explains why it continues to be added to many common household and personal care items.
